Registered Trader – Definition

A Registered Trader is an employee of a member firm who executes trades on Euronext Dublin's markets on behalf of clients of the firm or on the firm's own account. The Rules in relation to Registered Traders are outlined in Chapter 3 of the Member Firm Rules.

General Information

- Only individuals who undertake the role of a Registered Trader (as defined above) in a member firm of Euronext Dublin can be registered as a Registered Trader<sup>1</sup>.
- All applicants must complete a Registered Trader Application Form. Applicants who are transferring from another member firm should use the same form but are only required to complete pages 1, 4 and 5.
- Applications are assessed by the Regulation Department and will generally be processed within 5 business days. In any case, please note that for technical reasons any proposed commencement date for access to ISE T7 must be at least 2 days after submitting the form to the Regulation Department of Euronext Dublin and that the proposed trader ID must be set-up on the firm's systems prior to submission.
- A nominated individual or email group of a member firm are notified by email of Euronext Dublin's decision in relation to an application. As outlined in the Member Firm Rules, a member firm can appeal the decision of the Regulation Department of Euronext Dublin in relation to an applicant Registered Trader by appealing to the Admissions Committee.
- Member firms must notify Euronext Dublin if an individual ceases to undertake a registered trader role, ceases to be employed by a member firm or the firm no longer utilises the other user ID (using the Registered Trader Cessation Form).
- Relevant documentation should be sent to marketregulation@ise.ie in PDF form.

1 Important – Misleading, or attempting to mislead, Euronext Dublin on any information provided to gain registration as a Registered Trader may be considered an act of misconduct and may result in a refusal to grant Registered Trader status to the individual concerned, or if already registered, render the individual liable to disciplinary proceedings.
